From the age of about 3 until I was 15, my family and I would go camping in the forest for a week every year. We always went to the same place. It was about two hours' drive away in the car. My parents would always share the driving but generally my mother wanted to drive because the roads were very nice and almost empty.

I learnt many things about nature and the animals that live around the forests. My father also taught me about cutting wood and making fire. He always used to burn the food on the fire, so it was my mother who taught me and my sister how to cook on an open fire.

I think my favourite times were when we would all go off on long walks. It really felt as if we were going off on an adventure into the unknown.
